STEB APPRECIATION CERTIFICATES SPLASH MAGAZINE YEAR 2023- 2024 EDITIONS

School Magazines are powerful reflections of a school's identity and pulse - they are effectual carriers of a school's growth story, endeavours and accomplishments. Quite remarkably there is a dedicated coterie of AJPS Student Editors who work round the year, indefatigably to arrive upon timely, seamless releases of AJPS indigenous Monthly Magazine Publication-SPLASH.

The STEB (Student Editorial Board) Group, comprising the dynamic quartet of Koel Das, Paras Phadke, Shweta S., and Joel Alphonse has emerged as an exemplar of editorial prowess and unwavering dedication. Established earlier this year, the Student Editorial Board (STEB) has not only lived up to its lofty expectations but has exceeded them with finesse.

Highly recommended by their former teachers, the STEB members have showcased complete cooperation and an unerring commitment to their responsibilities. Meeting every deadline with precision, they have welcomed challenges with open arms, displaying an eagerness to innovate and work hard. SPLASH MAGAZINE has been elevated to new heights under the astute guidance of this group of out-of-the-box thinkers and writers. Their initiative to recommend and encourage the reading of Splash magazine reflects their commitment to fostering a 'Literary Culture'. The monumental contributions pouring in for SPLASH MAGAZINE EDITIONS, are a testament to their relentless encouragement and synergy.

In recognition of their exceptional service, Principal, Mrs. Geetha Somanathan awarded the STEB (Student Editorial Board) Group a well-deserved Certificate of Appreciation. The SPLASH EDITORIAL TEAM is in gratitude of the AJPS Management for recognising the towering efforts and ingenuity of the STEB team. The Vicissitudes of Life

Born in a beautiful town in Kerala called Palghat, I am a product of resilience, discipline and a rich tapestry of experiences woven through a childhood in a defence family. Growing up amidst the structured rhythms of military life, I have learnt invaluable lessons in adaptability, leadership, and the power of community. As a product of Kendriya Vidyalaya I have blossomed from a simple girl to a woman living the present moment, self-reliant to take on this fast paced world.

Teaching was always my passion. I inherited the quality of becoming a teacher from my grandparents. My friends and family would always encourage me that I had a knack for singing. Music is more than just a hobby for me; it's a philosophy that shapes my understanding of the world.

I have always believed in the quote " Drop your limits, rise to your potential ". The only limits that exist are the ones we impose on ourselves, that goes onto and become our self- limiting beliefs which imprison us if we do not reframe them and relook at the world with some cleaned "Meta Filters" of the mind.

In the last 12 years of my colourful versatile journey across various responsible jobs, I learnt to be a good listener; not be opinionated / judgemental; take things in my stride by living in the now. Life-long learning is my mantra. My life mission is to lead a peaceful life and spread more positivity around by cutting down on my emotional fabric!

My message to all, mistakes are like good old teachers we get to meet as we walk down life's path, just embrace them, internalize the learnings ;so that we don't repeat our mistakes and then just LET GO & MOVE ON!

Good Luck!

THE ROBUST SPLEEN

It's like the behind-the-scenes hero of your body that is a small organ that sits inside your left rib cage, just above your stomach. In adults, the spleen is about the size of an avocado. The spleen is a part of your lymphatic system and quietly works its magic, filtering out old blood cells and keeping your bloodstream tidy. It also produces white blood cells, the very ones that make up your immune system. It's like the custodian of your internal universe, sweeping away the mess and keeping things in order. It's also a key player in your immune system, helping to fend off pesky invaders and keeping you in tip-top shape while filtering them out from your blood stream. The spleen also acts as a storage tanker for your blood cells, both red and white, including the platelets. Think of your spleen as the silent guardian, watching over your health from the side-lines. So, here's to the unsung hero of your insides –

KUDOS SPLEEN, for quietly keeping things running smoothly.

STEB Editorial

In a world of abundance, it's disheartening to acknowledge that millions still go to bed hungry every night, and water scarcity worsens this challenge. Food insecurity and water scarcity, pressing global issues, undermine health, perpetuate poverty and hinder sustainable development.

Despite advancements in agriculture and water management, many, including children, struggle to access nutritious food and clean water daily. Poverty, conflict, climate change, and unequal resource distribution worsen these crises.

As global citizens, it's our ethical duty to address these challenges. We must ensure everyone has access to adequate food and water, addressing root causes like poverty, inequality, and lack of resources.

Governments, NGOs, and individuals all play a role. Prioritizing food security, sustainable agriculture, and water conservation in policies, and supporting local initiatives, can make a difference.

By uniting and taking action, we can build a future where no one goes hungry or thirsty. Let's strive for a world where food insecurity and water scarcity are relics of the past, and all have the opportunity to thrive.
